Pack Up and Move

What if you were asked to move out of your house right now? Let’s say you receive a suspicious letter in the mail detailing your expected move-out time and no information of where exactly you’re going. Would you have a few questions? Would you need more time to plan and say goodbye to your friends and family? Wouldn’t you like to know where exactly you’re going and what to expect when you got there?

As strange as that sounds, Abraham was basically in that position in Genesis 12. God told him to leave the place he grew up in and to “go to the land I will show you” (Gen. 12:1). God promised Abraham blessings, land, and his own nation in return for his faithfulness. That all sounds good, but don’t you think he had a few questions? How will I get there? What if I can’t make it? Will I know where to go?

Similarly, we’re asked to leave where we come from to a place God promises us. Peter calls Christians “foreigners” and “refugees” in this world (1 Pet. 2:11). That means that our journey isn’t complete. A pilgrim is someone who is traveling to another place. That’s what Abraham was: a pilgrim searching for the Promised Land God laid out for him. Jesus tells us He’s “preparing a place” for us (John 14:2). He asks us to pick up our things and follow Him. We may have questions, but He has the answers.
