“Now when they saw the boldness of Peter and John, and perceived that they were unlearned and ignorant men, they marvelled; and they took knowledge of them, that they had been with Jesus” (Acts 4:13).

The scientist, mathematician, and astronomer are revered for their intellectual capacity. These highly knowledgeable minds scoff at the idea of God who became a Man to provide eternal salvation for the sins of mankind. They consider eternal things “foolish” because their carnal minds cannot process spiritual concepts (1 Cor 2:14). However, God chose the very thing they deem foolish as the means by which man could be saved (1 Cor 1:20ff).

The apostles were not men who, if they did possess it, touted their intellectual prowess, yet people automatically knew something was different about them. We may not hold advanced degrees, be recognized as one who cured some terminal illness, or created some invention that revolutionized the world; however, people should recognize that we have a knowledge that extends beyond this material world. We have knowledge of the Eternal Father who can save the souls of those who will obey and secure their eternal destination.

What do others “perceive” of you?
